Additional Information

The transport truck's fuel tank contains roughly 100kg of fuel when full, and has a max speed of 100km/h.

While idling, the transport truck will burn through a fuel tank in 15 hours.

The transport truck does not contain a cabin-cooling system, but the cabin can be heated by running air over the engine.

Some cargo space may be exchanged for a mounted weapon on the rear of the vehicle. Check the vehicle handbook for rules.

The cab seats a driver and one passenger, the other passenger seats are in the back.

You can store containers of fuel in the cargo area to extend your range, each tanks-worth of fuel occupies 0.5 cargo spaces.
